Local and General

Mrs. A. R. Thomas is visiting friends in Calgary this week.

Mr. Ivor Lewis is at present on an extended visit to B.C. points.

Mrs. Jas. Ledingham and children returned home on Thursday last after a month's visit with relatives in Saskatchewan.

We are pleased to welcome in our midst Constable and Mrs. Birch who have taken up their residence in Crossfield.

Don't forget to visit the Ladies' booth on Fair day.

Capt. F. R. Robinson and Mrs. Robinson have forsaken their home in Carstairs and moved to town. The Captain found that Crossfield was a more convenient centre for his duties in connection with Local Improvement work. They are occupying the Brown residence.

A gang of men with road grader and teams are busy on the main street of the village. When this work is completed we shall have a street suitable to the needs of the place.

What's a Fair without peanuts, candy and ice cream. Try these at the Ladies' Booth.

The Fair Board acknowledges with thanks the donation of the Atlas Lumber Co. of paint necessary for the painting of the railing round the Judges' ring.

A special meeting of the School Board was held in the office of the Secretary-Treasurer on Tuesday evening. It was decided at this meeting to take decisive steps to collect all arrears of School taxes.

Mr. J. H. O'Neil in charge of a gang of men is busily erecting a cattle shed at the Fair Grounds. Let us encourage this go-ahead spirit of the Directors by a large entry list.

The visitors at the Fair will be well looked after at the Ladies' Booth.

We note that several of the Alberta towns and villages are having their share of typhoid and other fevers. Let us as citizens take warning and keep the garbage collected in proper cans.

If you require to renew your old Loan or take out a new one call and see me, as I can save you money. I represent the N. of Scotland Can. Mortgag Co., The Canada Life, and others.

It is reported that the Government have given instructions to local men to have the two miles of road running east from town put in shape. This will be a much needed improvement.

Considerable discussion has taken place this week over the new Bye-law regulating the running at large of cows, etc. It is to be hoped, however, that the matter will rest there, as we as citizens should co-operate to assist the authorities in the enforcement of all regulations governing the welfare of the village.

The Grain Growers Guide can be had for the balance of the year for 25 cents. The People's Paper.—Address : Grain Growers Guide, Winnipeg. Don't forget your Local Paper either.

SANOL AND SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES CURE—WONDERFUL

Below is given a copy of a letter from Mr. J. H. Dugan, Druggist, Winnipeg. This is but typical of many we receive, and it is typical of the Sanol and Sanol's Anti-Diabetes, and the many cures these remedies have produced.

The Sanol Manufacturing Co., Winnipeg.

Dear Sirs:

In regard to the sale of SANOL and SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES I might say that I have sold over $100 worth for about three months. Up to now I have not sold one box of SANOL'S pure supply of my customers, who now is completely recovered.

Another customer has been obliged to stock it. This gentleman was so well satisfied with his results that he has sent it to his friends.

To this time I had never taken up any particular interest in it, but when customer after customer would come in and tell me of their success with it, I began to take more interest.

For them I came to see the manufacturer it would be worth my while to do so. I have now recommended it to my customers.

It is a wonderful product, nothing but words of praise for SANOL and its cure. This I have done, and I have heard nothing but words of praise for SANOL'S Anti-Diabetes.

Yours truly,
Austin Dugan,
F. J. Hamby, Mgr.

Lazy Man

Noddy is the laziest man I know. He has an invention fixed so that by merely pulling a wire in bed he can sleep in that chair, but that doesn't seem to improve matters.

Why not?

He's too lazy to pull the wire.

Fishy

A gentleman, after lunching off two plates, approached the cashier's desk and said, "I have three fish to pay for."

The waiter (who had attended on him) was passing at the time, and said, "No, two, sir."

The gentleman replied:

"Excuse me, I have three to pay for—two soles, and one sole."

Miller's Worm Powders are completely worthless from the medical point of view, and do no harm, but do no good, damage that worms cause and so invigorate the constipation that it speedily recovers from the disorders of the digestion that are the result of the worm infestation.

They do their work thoroughly and strength and soundness follow their use.

An old negro, taken ill, called in a physician of his own race. There being no doctor of his race in town, he at last asked for a white doctor. The doctor came, felt the old man's pulse and examined his tongue. Did you other doctor take your temperature? He asked. "No," said the negro. "I am negro. I didn't miss anything but my watch so far."

Murd's Liniment used by Physicians

Judge Greenway of the London Waterloo County Court, who has just completed thirty-two years on the bench, has many pleasant reminiscences of Lord Russell, who used to stay at his home in his cottage near his Surrey, where he used with the future Lord Chief Justice, he ruled everyone with a rod of iron. On one occasion, being in a hurry to get his wife to the church, he called his maid: Here, Mary, take away the mare; your master has already had his fast. Come on, Mary, for him to have cleared the table quickly, and the guests sat down to a long night of what,

Wonder to the Wife

A lady is trying an experiment. Her husband is a brilliant man, but loquacious, especially during his shortcomings, the wife is feeding him fish. Three or four times a week she prepares him in, and demands that he eat. He is a show-off, some timeliness and has a marked predilection for water, but being innocent of his wife's motives, continued to eat the dishes set before him.

To her pastor the woman recently confided.

You see, sister, John is a very remarkable man, but he wastes too much time sermonizing when he should be thinking. He talks altogether too much. To counteract this I have decided him to eat nothing but fish for the last two months. I have served him with seventeen varieties of fish cooked in forty-seven different ways. Why, fish? asked the pastor, greatly interested.

Because, replied the wife, fish is good for thought.

She said, the reverend gentleman, but you noticed any marked change?

The wife's face grew sad.

Cornelia's Way

Love Wins Out

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Just as the green liner drew away from the pier, Cornelia saw Jack Gray come dashing down the pier. He did not seem to see her at first, for his eyes anxiously scanned the rows of faces bent over the rail. Then there came an expression of blankest astonishment as their eyes met, and she waved a dainty handkerchief in farewell.

He made no movement to respond to her farewell. He stood and stared and stared at the boat until all she could see was his white face blushing into the crowd. Then the whole stampede behind him died out.

For a moment she sat alone on the deck once more and crept to the cabin which had been reserved for her. She sipped a cup of broth and sent the steward to inquire if a wireless message had been received for Mr. Franklin. His answer was that the liner had gone to sea in the animated dead deck scene.

Again she saw the wharf and Jack's startled face as he saw her standing there. Why should he be startled, for he must have received her note early that morning, saying that the time of their engagement was a mistake and that she was sailing for Europe immediately and that he must not try to break her resolution. He would know the reason, she had ended, and probably did, she argued now to herself.

It was a dull trip; with little to vary the monotony of an exceedingly rough passage. When her feet pressed European soil she was seized with a dreamful homesickness and longed to return. With an impulse as sudden as her starting had been she engaged passage for the next trip under an assumed name, for it seemed unnecessary that her foolishness should be avenged.

"YOU MUST HAVE BEEN THINKING OF GRAY, THEN," HE VENTURED.

"My name," she had stammered when engaging this homeward bound passage, "is Mrs. Grey. I am Mrs. Grey," and she almost cried in the effort to prevent the smart from rushing of her hurried tongue. Why had she chosen Jack's name to masquerade under?

Two weeks after she had sailed from New York she was homeward bound on the same vessel. The first morning she gained the deck and began a brisk walk. She had circled the deck twice and was approaching her own chair when she suddenly stopped, just tucking himself into an adjustable chair. As she approached he appeared to be talking to his neighbor on the other side, and it was not until she was snugly enmeshed in her own chair and was arranging the ring about her feet that he turned suddenly, and their glances met.

He looked at her with the casual passing glance of the polite stranger who sees a pretty girl, and then his gaze wandered to the dancing waves beyond the rail. Cornelia's smile faded, and her fingers lost their grip on the hook she was holding, and it fell to the deck.

Instantly he had recovered it and turned it to her with a slight lift of his eye.

"Thank you," murmured Cornelia faintly. "Don't mention it," said the young man.

Cornelia read for hours on the deck there, while the young man also read a horrid book learned looking volume, but he never seemed to be very interested. Not once did he look at Cornelia, although she found her eyes again and again straying toward the stern profile of his handsome face.

At meals she discovered the stranger at the table, and when he seemed very popular, for there were both joking and garrulous among the fellow passengers whenever he appeared.

There were several pretty girls at that table, and Cornelia suddenly discovered that her own table was filled with very dull and pokey people.

She had given up eating out, and when the swift liner was within one day's time of reaching New York Cornelia lay on the deck and was rescued by the young man who had so greatly excited her interest. It was only natural that she should be followed by his request to accompany him back to her walk, and she assented with flushed cheeks and shining eyes.

"One more day, and then home," he said lightly. "I hope you enjoyed your stay."

"Thanks. I didn't stay long. I came out on this steamer and—found I must return on her, so you see my stay was curtailed."

"Same with me. Came out to look up a relative." It was his turn to be surprised, and not being successful, took the next steamer back which happened to be this one.

"Then you didn't find her?" ventured Cornelia with a new timidity.

"Herr," he questioned.

"I thought you said—that," uttered Cornelia.

He shook his head positively. "I said a relative," he corrected gently, and this time he didn't blush.

"Oh," said Cornelia.

"She was a lady," explained the young man.

"Oh," said Cornelia again.

"She ran away from me. It was very sad. You see, we expected to be married next month," he explained with engaging frankness, "and we couldn't agree upon where the honeymoon should be spent. I was for a vacation trip, and she was for a long cruise around the world."

Cornelia stifled an exclamation. After all, she said to herself, "You make your fiancée appear to be a most shallow person. She is always guided in her movements by matters of dress."

"She is neither shallow nor unattractive, but she seems to be a little trying to make me do what she wills in spite of my own desires." He laughed rather bitterly. "You see, there are some women who must always be experimenting with their love life, and this girl was always in the strain of future tests. A man may love a woman to distraction, but the perfect subjection to her will is no proof of it is it?"

"Of course not," said Cornelia, rather startled at his tone.

"What are you going to do if you find her?" asked Cornelia after a little pause.

She held her to get her yachting togs ready, for the Maida sails June 20 for all around the world," he said quickly. "Suppose she prefers the north woods?"

He removed his cap and passed a well shaped hand across a brow where wispy hairs were gathering fast. "I'd remind her of what Ruth said—'I'll go where you go.'"

"Ever think of me?" he asked. "But Cornelia had fled from his side and left him standing alone beside the rail with a curious light in his eyes.

In the next day just before the low, mournful sound of land was sighted, that he came up to Cornelia, who was standing all alone. The wind blew aside the grey veil and showed a tremor of scarlet lips and the flicker of a smiling heart. Cornelia Franklin, Miss Greta, was looking very lovely and very proud that morning.

"Good morning, Miss Grey," he greeted her, but she turned her head swiftly and shot an impudent glance in his direction.

"It is not my name, as you very well know."

"You chose it—why?" he asked quizzically.

"It was the first one that came into my head."

"You must have been thinking of Gray then," he ventured.

"I was—naturally," said Cornelia haughtily. "I was engaged to John Gray you see. I am—extending the same consideration you offered me, and we discussed where we would have the honeymoon."

"I understand," she added, with sudden panic, snatching her hand from his quick grasp. "Thinking to test his love for me, I dropped him a line saying that he must be a fool to marry a girl who could not marry him. I gave him until the next day to reply, and when I did not hear from him I suspected he had not received your note until after he reached home that night. I have been here ever since at the wharf to bid friends to a house and saw you by the most accident."

"Perhaps he hurried home, found your note, caught a steamer the next morning and arrived in England in time to accompany you on this steamer."

"Perhaps he did," admitted Cornelia.

"Perhaps you were both very foolish young people and have found out it doesn't make much difference where you are together."

"Perhaps," said Cornelia again.

"Were you coming back to New York, Cornelia?" he asked, with a change of tone.

"Yes, Jack," she said.

"What were you going to say, dear?"

"I was going to tell you that your way would be my way—on land or sea."

"Cornelia's voice was very low.

"And I had determined," he said softly, "that my old way would do for me so long as it was Cornelia's way."

It was settled. Jordan saw his visitor out, and as far as the first main crossing. Then they parted to meet on the morrow. Murgatroyd walked alone, and was soon in his yards, when he was lucky enough to come across a hansom just starting for its nocturnal beat. Murgatroyd called out to him, and was soon in his driver's position. He had forgotten his disguise. The sight of a half-crown simplified matters; and by 9 p.m. Murgatroyd was back again in Henrietta Street.

In half an hour Murgatroyd found himself for the second time that day at Sir Richard Hanley's boudoir. This way, said Miss Hanley, is in the small drawing-room.

Mr. Murray Murgatroyd.

Miss Rose was in the depths of a long conversation to greet him eagerly, and without ceremony.

How good you to come again, Mr. Murgatroyd. You have brought me news of your return.

Murgatroyd did not answer for a moment; strange unworded thoughts were stirring in him, and he felt embarrassed.

More than news: I have brought you the watch itself.

Murgatroyd, who was now in evening dress, took the watch and broke the chain of gold from his pocket, and held it out to her. Maud gasped out her hand eagerly.

Oh, I am so glad! I never expected it! How good you have been about it.

I am delighted it happened to be in my power. The police would have failed where I was fortunate enough to succeed.

There was still standing near to another. There was an element of excitement about both, but not altogether warranted by the occasion, or the shrewdness and brevity of their acquaintance.

So the police did not find it?

Maud was holding the watch in her hand, and caressing it with the other, as if it were a precious thing.

No! I was my own policeman! I dressed for the part, but not in a blue uniform; and Murgatroyd laughed as

VARICOSE VEINS ABOVE ANKLE

Broke Into Sore, Itched and Burned.
So Badly Could Scarcely Sleep.
Red and Inflamed. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Entirely Cured.

$17 Greenock Ave., Toronto, Ontario.—My trouble was varicose veins above my ankle. It broke into a sore which was very painful. The sore itched and burned so badly that I could scarcely sleep. The skin around it was red and inflamed. I had to sit up for a short time each night for a few weeks. I tried several ointments but they didn't seem to do it any good. Then I was recommended to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed my body with Cuticura Soap and put a little Cuticura Ointment on and they gave the greatest relief. In a few weeks the sore was entirely cured.

SALT RHEUM ON BABY'S HEAD

Woodstock, Yarmouth Co., N.B.—My baby was about three weeks old when he had salt rheum on his head and forehead. It was a thin white wash which came on his head, and ran down his forehead and formed a hard, brown crust. It looked terrible, and it must have bothered him quite a bit. I took him to the doctor to wash him with the Cuticura Soap and hot water and put the Cuticura Ointment on, and in three weeks he had no more trouble. I can't speak too highly of the Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap. (Signed) Mrs. George B. Allen, Nov. 18, 1911.

I hope you are not right? It was not an altogether inviting neighbourhood, so I took a friend with me.

Did your friend know for whom you were going?

He required to know nothing except my will, and Murgatroyd produced the pocket of his swallow-tail.

Maud shrank back a little, and Murgatroyd restored the weapon to its scabbard.

That was my friend, he said quietly. I had no occasion to use it.

Won't you sit down?

Yes, you, it is late—for a call; I ought to be going. He sat down nevertheless.

My father has gone to a reception at one of the fashionable clubs, but not been present yet. I am to be at the first drawing-room. Anyway, I should not go to those political things, I suppose.

CHAPTER III—ANGLOPHOBIA

Mr. Muller's compliments, and a bottle of whisky, were staying at the Falcon's ear, John Muller's white-table this evening—8.30 p.m.

The long looked-for invitation had come at last. Mr. Murray Murgatroyd, accompanied by his lady friend, in the capacity of valet, arrived at the Falcon, Tornmouth, he soon gleaned the news that Mr. Muller was away from home on a vacation week, and the short time available before the opening of Parliament had elapsed before Muller's return. Murgatroyd had been to see him, and found him a man whom, as any other, he would have saluted him completely.

He had found ready to his hand a couple of handsomely bound books, and he had been out with the East Devon twice, with satisfactory results, and once with the Devon and Somerset, when, in the course of his pleasure, he had come to the side of their extensive district. But the business he had come upon, which brooked no delay, was sailing, and these pleasant excursions after sport did not expedite matters.

Now Muller was back; and he had sent Murgatroyd the invitation, which was more than a milliard enough. Murgatroyd had been sorely tempted to make use of Mr. Jordan's capableness in the borrowing department, but he had resisted, especially as it was only the most temporary abstractions of which he required a copy; but he scrupled to use his money until direct negotiation.

Higden, Mr. Muller's house, was a long two-storyed building, which had once been a manor. Only the hall remained, and a decrepit eldritch recluse remained to cast the halo of departed sanctity over the modern dwelling house, a greater part of which was only about a century old. Some gripe there had been, however, had been made to adapt the more modern architecture to the older portions of the structure.

The windows were all broken, and the years had lent themselves to the depreciation;

so that Higden suggested that he should get a new set of windows, and a new roof.

Higden, Mr. Muller's house, was a long two-storyed building, which had once been a manor. Only the hall remained, and a decrepit eldritch recluse remained to cast the halo of departed sanctity over the modern dwelling house, a greater part of which was only about a century old.

Some gripe there had been, however, had been made to adapt the more modern architecture to the older portions of the structure.

The windows were all broken, and the years had lent themselves to the depreciation;

so that Higden suggested the reflection he had seen in the glass of his bed-room window for an hour before?

I hope you are not right?

It was not an altogether inviting neighbourhood, so I took a friend with me.

Did your friend know for whom you were going?

He required to know nothing except my will, and Murgatroyd produced the pocket of his swallow-tail.

Maud shrank back a little, and Murgatroyd restored the weapon to its scabbard.

That was my friend, he said quietly. I had no occasion to use it.

Won't you sit down?

Yes, you, it is late—for a call; I ought to be going. He sat down nevertheless.

My father has gone to a reception at one of the fashionable clubs, but not been present yet. I am to be at the first drawing-room. Anyway, I should not go to those political things, I suppose.

BOWSER DIES HARD

But His Mother-in-law Wins From Start to Finish.

SHE COMES UNEXPECTEDLY.

And Proceeds to Put Her Rampageous Son Through His Paces—The Lawn Will Not Be Planted in Hollyhocks; Neither Will the House Be Painted.

By M. QUAD,
[Copyright, 1893, by Associated Literary Press.]

I AM Mr. Bowser's mother-in-law. I am glad to be married into the family.

Get just the kind of a man that needs taking down a peg or two every few days, and I'm just the woman to do it.

I believe he would poison me if he safely could, and I admit that some day I may break his neck.

I packed my trunk and took a little journey the other day. I gave him no time to get up, and when I went to arrive, he reached his home from the depot about 6 o'clock in the evening. He happened to be in the front hall and answered my ring bell, and for a moment after catching sight of me he looked like one who was staring at a ghost.

"If you have not lost what little sense you ever possessed," I said, "you will pay the driver and get my trunk upstairs. How is Amenda?"

"She—she—is well!" he stammered. "We don't know where you are." "Not probably not, but let my little way of dropping in when I'm not expected. Get a move on you!"

Bowser's Plans.

I was soon in the arms of my daughter, and after dinner she took me up to her bedroom and told me how glad she was that I had come. Mr. Bowser

"I AM MR. BOWSER'S MOTHER-IN-LAW" was on the lampshade, and my arrival was opportune. After questioning her at length I discovered the following:

That he was planning to repaint the house, although it had two fresh coats last year.

That he was intending to plant the whole back yard to sunflowers next spring.

That the whole front yard was to be given up to hollyhocks.

That he was going to clean house and be three weeks about it.

That he was going to attend an auction next day and buy $500 worth of antique furniture.

That he had raised a rumpus about the gas bill and charged his wife with having got up at midnight and turned on the water.

That he had hired up a dressmaker for $2 per day and he had called it highway robbery and said he would stay home and do the sewing himself before he would pay any such exortion.

There were a lot more things, one of them being that he had borrowed a gun and was going out into the country next night to stay all night and shoot snakes, and, of course, I felt it my duty to tackle him as soon as possible. At first he would not listen to me, he was sulky and scowling, and the only time he spoke was when he was said:

"I see by the papers that this has been a great year so far for the old women to die off."

"Yes, it has," I replied, "but I'm left on earth yet, and I can manage cracks as well as you."

He Stays Home.

Directly after dinner I heard him telling Amanda that he'd drop over to the What Is It club for an hour or two and give us a chance to talk, but I thought it best to let him have his say.

"Mr. Bowser, that What Is It will wait for you in vain tonight. Your mother-in-law has arrived, and there are a few things she would like to say to you."

"But I don't care to talk," he gruffly replied.

"But you will talk just the same. If you want me to talk here, all right; if you want me to follow you to the club, just say so."

He hung in the wind for a minute and then sat down and began whispering to himself to show that he was not afraid. Mrs. Bowser motioned me over and had to speak him all I could, but it did not help much. Mr. Bowser is a man who cannot be spoken to. The only way to deal with him is to crush him. True, he will only stay crushed as long as I am in the house, but it has a moral effect afterward.

"Mr. Bowser," I presently began.

"What is this I hear about the gas?

"Your daughter has wasted $2 worth to spite me," he replied.

"You know better, sir! The idea of a baldheaded man weighing 200 pounds telling any such story as that looks like boy's play. Don't you want some simple facts?"

You never go down cellar that you don't leave a blaze of light behind you. That's where the gas has gone. You are the most careless man in the world, and I'm not surprised.

"Let me hear more about Amenda's vagrancy."

"Now, about this vagrancy?"

"The house is to have two coats, and I am going to do the work myself. I calculate it will take me two weeks."

"Two weeks? The house doesn't need it, and no painting will be done. If you were to dash around here for two weeks your own wife and half of the neighbors would commit suicide."

"What! I can't paint my own house and begin to do the work myself?"

"I'm not so foolish as that," he growled.

He Mother-in-law Scores.

"My language was plain, sir! Sit down before you get a crack in the back. There will not only be no painting done, but if you want to raise sum money, you can always sell a valuable piece of vacant ground."

"I do not admire them, and as I may be here all summer I object to having them around."

"She may be here all summer?" he asked.

"Having disposed of the hollyhocks and the sunflowers, we will take up housecleaning," I continued.

"Amanda will see to that and take about three days, and while she is doing it you can either eat off the table or sleep on the floor and help yourself or go to some hotel."

"By thunder, woman, I—!"

"That will do, Mr. Bowser! Don't swear at me and don't call me 'woman'! You are red in the face and your ears are twinkling, but I will do no good to get mad. I am the mother-in-law."

"Woman, this is too much, too much! I'd like to know what you are about."

Mr. Bowser. If you are not very careful of your emotions you will tumble down with aoplexy some day. And now about the dressmaker. I shall go after her the first thing in the morning. Her prices are very reasonable, and I can get a good suit to you to kick. If you want a seven dollar box of cigars, you order them without a qualm. It will be $2 per day for about two weeks, and she won't need your assistance with the dressing needles."

He is Quieted.

"I am told that you have borrowed a gun and are going to the country to shoot snails at night. In the first place, you couldn't hit a barn at ten rods; in the next, snails don't fly at night; and your ears are twinkling, but I will do no good to get mad. I am the mother-in-law."

"Yes."

"And this is my house."

"Yes."

"And I run things to suit myself. What right have you to come down here and—?"

The right of the mother-in-law, sir, and that's the best right in the world. One more thing this evening. You were saying you'd drop over to the What Is It club for a couple of hours. Well, you won't drop. They will miss you, and they'll be inquiring why is it. Let 'em inquire. Your place is right here, and here you will stay.

"I am going up to join Amenda now, and I am going to stay all night. I am going to hang doors, ratting the furnaces or stamping up and down, you'll hear from me. You may think it a good time to mend the water pipes, fix a door, experiment on the gas meter or drive nails, but let me assure you to the contrary. These few words this evening are only a sort of a prologue. Tomorrow we will get down to real business and have a thorough understanding."

I vanished upstairs and Mr. Bowser stood there flat after me, and I heard him muttering like an angry horn. He didn't know whether to burst out a widow or break three or four chairs, but at last he flung himself down on the lounge and thought it all over.

"An hour later his wife and I came creeping softly upstairs. We found him asleep and a tear on his cheek, while the cat occupied a nearby chair and regarded him with looks of sorrow. Rampageous Bowser had been quieted.

When a Person Faints.

If a person faints he ought to be laid down flat on his back, for this will facilitate the return of blood to his head. Indeed, nature has provided for this, for a person who faints will fall down to recover if no one helps him. On the other hand, a person with an epileptic or cataleptic fit, indicated by convulsions and frothing at the mouth, ought to be propped up so as to facilitate the flow of blood from the head to the body, which, with the aid of a cold cloth, will still further promote cooling the palms of the hands. Now, I cannot account for it, but the fact is that all ignorant people, in an emergency, reverse this treatment. A person who simply faints is carefully supported in a sitting position, while a cold water application, fanned, is applied to the head, resulting in a prolongation of the fainting.

The New Agricultural School at Olds.

W. J. Elliott, B.S.A., Principal.

The School of Agriculture now going along erection at the town of Olds will be open for students on or about November 1st. The school building will be completed, owned, the furniture will be furnished and equipped in a first-class manner for the teaching of practical and scientific agriculture, animal science, and home economics.

The building is a most complete one, and has been pronounced by experts to be particularly well adapted to its purpose for which it is being built. The machine shop, carpenter shop, chemical laboratory and library will be all equipped in first-class manner so as to meet the boy who may attend the school the same requirements they have in the first two years' course in any agricultural college.

A staff of competent teachers will be engaged, and the work will be under the direction of Mr. W. J. Elliott, B.S.A., who has been employed for the last two years by the Alberta Department of Agriculture as their Superintendent of Agriculture, and who will be Principal of the School.

Mr. Elliott is well-known in the province as he has assisted the Department of Agriculture and other control committees with the development of the trail, and has proven himself in that work perhaps one of the most efficient teachers in the various branches of agriculture in Western Canada.

Mr. Elliott was born in Ontario farm, in the county of Huron, in 1875. He received his education in the public school and in the University of Manitoba attending the College for four years after passing the entrance examination. In the securing of his education, Mr. Elliott worked his way through his own way entirely, and the money with which he educated himself was made mostly by working as a hired man with various farmers in the West, where there is no better experience for a foundation in agricultural education. It had been his ambition to attend the Agricultural College at Guelph, and when he did so he made his way there with $40.00, so that he practically had to work his way through the institution, which he did, graduating in 1903 with the degree of B.Sc.

During his collegiate and agricultural college days, though working hard, he found time to do much voluntary work, and was regarded as one of the best football players in Ontario. After his graduation from Guelph he spent a short time in a dairy farm in Huron, and then went to Minnesota where he managed a cheese factory at Island Lake for two years; then, for a year and a half he was manager of a cheese factory at Stillwater, Minnesota. In the spring of 1905, he engaged with the Dairy and Food Department of the State to assist in the organization of the dairy industry, and in the fall of the same year he took charge of the Dairy and Animal Industry Department of the Agricultural College at Manitoba. Mr. Elliott was appointed to make Dean of the Short Courses of Agriculture in connection with this College, while practising his profession.

This experience in connection with extension work and teaching in the College of Agriculture in that State has prepared Mr. Elliott for his work at Olds.

In January, 1910, he accepted his present position which he has just resigned with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and became a resident of Alberta for the last three years.

Mr. Elliott takes charge of the School at Olds with a first-hand knowledge of conditions in Alberta, as well as an understanding of the system of agricultural instruction that is to be given at these schools.

He is a born teacher, and has addressed meetings at different parts of the province of Alberta, and there are few people in Alberta who have a better understanding of the subject he has under consideration.

The Principal of the school will open up the Olds market in July, and will spend the time between then and the opening of the school in making the arrangements, and in making general preparations for the work to be done.

Any prospective student should address correspondence to the Principal of the school at Olds, and will receive information in regard to courses, etc.

A two-months' course in Domestic Science and Household Economy will be given for girls. This is preliminary to a full six months' course that will be put on for boys.

Address Miss Georgina Stiven, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, Alberta.

The Army of Constipation

is Growing Smaller Every Day.

Two young women stood at the train junction.

They're all crowded. Billie, we'd better walk, said one.

I'm going to ride, and I bet you I'll get a seat, too, humpishly retorted Billie.

The stronger will prevailed and the two boarded the next car that came along. Of course, it was crowded just as the two previous ones.

There was no one else in a seat to the women, the younger of the two mischievously whispered:

Thought you, said she, you'd get a seat, Billie.

You wait, replied the other; then, going up to a sedate-looking gentleman, she exclaimed:

My dear Mr. Green, how delighted I am to meet you again! You are a most stranger! Will I accept your seat? Well, I do feel tired, I admit. Thank you so much.

Sit down, Jane, my girl, said he, pointing to the vacant seat. I don't often see you out on a washing-day. You must feel tired, I'm sure. How's your mistress?

Regarding the late Concerts at King George's Hall, Jane continued plausibly. It might be mentioned that many complaints have been made in the past about the overcrowding at these famous meetings. The concert hall is so considerably enlarged that it has been necessary for the Lord Chamberlain to invite a much larger number that can be comfortably accommodated. During the Victoria's reign the number was limited to two thousand. Everybody who has been in office or who in office gets a seat, as a matter of course, and there are a great number of other persons who are on the permanent list.

THE BEST MEDICINE
I HAVE EVER USED

"The best medicine I have ever used is what I bought of members of Harry's Own Tablets. Once a mother has tablets for her little ones she will use no other medicine. She never fails to recommend them to her friends. Concerning them Mrs. John Thompson, Coutts, Alta., says: "I have given Baby's Own" Tablets to my doctor for common colds, thinking the best medicine I have ever used. Please send me two more boxes as I would not care to be without them." Tablets are available in medicine dealers' stores, by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The coming destruction of the Cafe Anglais in Paris is awakening many recollections amongst the older Londoners who used to visit Paris more frequently than a year ago. For one the restaurant was famous for its food and frequenter, who include nearly every celebrity in Europe. It was here that Edith Piaf, the famous singer, conducted although strongly dashed with Bohemianism. All that was best in the world and animal life could be found there. It was one of the few restaurants which kept open through the siege and there was also ground for belief in the story that it never remained afterwards to re-dine.

Drives Asthma Like Magic.—The immediate help from Dr. J. D. Kelly's "Asthma Remedy" seems like magic. Nevertheless, it is only a natural remedy made in a natural way. Smoke or vapor, reaching the most remote passage of the lungs, drives away the asthma and opens a way for fresh air to enter. It is sold by dealers throughout the land.

Mr. Brown had not a very good opinion of landladies in general until the other day, when he happened to see his bestowing a kindness on the landlady of a house he had租ed. Anyone who would be kind to dumb animals would be kind to human creatures, and he hastened to command her to stop. I'm glad to see that you give all the scraps to the cat, Mrs. Miggs.

Oh yes, sir, she replied. Well I say, Mr. Brown, is, be kind to the cat, and you'll find it saves you a lot of washin' up.

"Made-in-Canada" Train.

This much advertised train duly arrived up to time, and there was a great crowd waiting for the gangway to be put in position. The people from the surrounding country had mustered up well, and by the large number of rigs coming in the farmers and their families must have been up in the small hours of the morning to get to town as early as they did.

As might have been expected the train contained almost everything that could be placed in it with effect, care and taste had been bestowed upon the arrangement of the various articles making a very good exhibit. Every article on the train being manufactured in Canada.

The main object of the exhibit is to advertise these goods so that the people may know what is being done and made in the country.

The time is fast approaching when we shall be in a position to provide all necessary articles either in the way of food, clothing, machinery, or in fact any other article. Canada must and will develop in every way.

Such an advertisement as the Made-in-Canada Train lets people see what is being made in the country and will tend as an impetus for other industries in new centres, and surely these are needed and there is plenty of scope for them. They would also have a tendency to stop a lot of the floating population.

There were exhibits from forty-two different firms.

Exhibitors who had agents in town displayed cards to that effect.

The number who went through the train was indicated as 470.

The number of conveyances in town on Monday morning was 75.

The train left shortly after 10:30 for the north.

Baseball Notes.

Airdrie 22, Crossfield 2... Such was the result of the game in Airdrie on the 6th. The boys have no excuses to offer. Several changes are being made in the team for the game against Olds which we hope will be for the better. However, we have five home games before the boys go away again, and judging from the way they are practising they should be able to hold their own.

Women's Institute.

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute took place on Saturday afternoon in the L.O.O.F. Hall. A large number were present. Mrs. McLain's paper on "Butter Making" was excellent, and received much commendation. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed Mrs. W. Mo Rory's paper on "Helpful Suggestions."

The next meeting will take place July 5th. All the women are cordially invited to attend.

His Honour: "You are charged with stealing chickens. Have you any witnesses?"

Prisoner: "I have not." "I don't steal chickens before witnesses."
